Love Finds A Way.

By Jeanette H. Walworth.

A perplexed look came into the wide eyes of Tom as he read the letter.

"But I don't love him, father?"

"Again that pathetic 'I, father? Oh, tell me how!'"

"Marry Thomas Broxton. He loves you. You know that he does."

"But I do not love him, father?"

"Marry—Thomas—Broxton—He loves you. You know that he does."

"Father, have you forgotten Clarence, forgotten that I betrothed myself to him with your full consent? I belong to Clarence Westover, father, and I love him."

A grayish pallor was creeping over the sick man's pined features. She did not know that it was death. She had never before stood in the presence of the grim conqueror. Her father's voice was lifted to a clear high note in a supreme effort to impose his will upon her.

"Marry Thomas Broxton! I command it!"

A cold current of air swept across the bed. Olivia rose quickly to close the door which it had entered. Another hand drew it softly shut from the outside. She turned, and saw her father enter her final protest against this monstrous invasion of her rights.

"But, father, would you want me to live my life out a stupendous falsehood?"

The unseeing eyes stared straight before her, the tired lips fluttered and drooped; a heavy sigh came from the bed. Matthews was done with beseeching, done with commanding.

In a piercing cry he called his name aloud and again. It brought to the chamber of dead Reuben, Dr. Govan, who had just arrived; Clarence Westover, who had been in the room, standing in the distant drawing room, and—Thomas Broxton.

It was toward the latter that Reuben turned his eyes anxiously.

"Oh, Mr. Thomas, if you'd only got here a hour earlier! It's your fate to be always too late."

"It is my fate, Reuben, as you say, so we won't quarrel with it." Broxton answered quietly and turned to question Dr. Govan.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE MARCH OF THE ARMY.

Mandeville was not so well supplied with roads as historic Rome, to which all roads lead. Only one led to and from Mandeville. One light and indulgent individual preferred to take the route of a route after leaving that sacred spot some 60 miles in the rear; but, whatever his final destination, the warfarer must make his start from a modest little depot labeled "Loop and Twine R. R." on the outskirts of the town.

Reuben recalled this necessity with some satisfaction as he jumped into his smart little cart and urged his horse toward the depot at its best speed.

Having failed to find Thomas Broxton either at the Commercial Men's name, Dr. Govan's or Miss Olivia Spillman's, he proposed himself to him off at the station. He flung the reins to his man and jumped out of his cart dazed, as Thomas, who had been waiting for him, mounted the platform steps with bag in hand. He advanced with cordially extended hand.

"I'm awfully glad to find you, Broxton. You came very near giving me the slip."

Thomas met the extended hand with perfunctory politeness. He wished he could feel more cordial toward Olivia's lover, but deep wounds need time for their healing.

Westover was distinctly aware of this wordless antagonism. He rather expected to should have felt quite as sour and belittled by him as he did by the man who had been so kind to accept the hospitality of strangers under his old roof.

Tom covered his confusion hurriedly.

"You see," he said easily, falling into step and going with Tom toward the waiting room, "I want to talk to you about a matter of interest to both of us. I don't want to lose sight of you just yet. Can't I induce you to spend the night with me?" He stopped and reddened. It occurred to him that the last of the Broxtons would not care to accept the hospitality of strangers under his old roof.

Tom covered his confusion hurriedly.

"You are very kind, but I came down only on an urgent summons from my surgeon, arrived too late to do him any good, and to the hospital and now must hurry back to my work."

He flung his bag on a bench in the waiting room and consulted a moon faced clock over the ticket office. It showed a margin of half an hour for free transit.

"Have you got to get your ticket?" Westover asked.

"No! I bought a round trip ticket when I left Kansas City," adding, with a little little smile, "Cheaper, you know."

"Then, after all, I've got plenty of time for my say," said Tom, smiling himself near his bag. Inwardly curious, he watched his rival with entire composure as he mentioned his card and brought from an inner pocket a handsome pocketbook of Russia leather.

"I have here, Broxton," said Clarence, selecting a paper from the contents of the bag, "a document which, I think, ought to be in your possession. I have taken the liberty of copying it and have sent you a copy to Genoa, where the father is upon his way for some time to come on account of my mother's health. I took that liberty because the Westovers are so much interested in it as you are."

Tom cast a look of languid interest toward the sheet of yellow paper which Clarence still retained between his finger and thumb.

"My possession of it needs some sort of an explanation, so you will have to read the preface, a thing I always escape by skipping. If you were left to suppose that either my father or I knew of the existence of this paper when we purchased Broxton Hall, I being part owner of it on the strength of a grand maternal legacy, you would be put to it to decide whether we were fools or knaves."

"I don't in the least catch the drift yet," said Tom, smiling faintly, "but so far I have never placed you in either category."

Not yet, but you will after reading this. But the preface is so long that it never happens to bear Mother Spillman's name upon some papers she had lost. Westover papers that were of value to you, Broxton."

Tom's face and voice softened.

"Yes, poor old bedlamite! She was faithful to her attachment to me for the sake of those who went before."

She urged me with considerable violence to look up the matter, and she said affairs and hinted wistfully at some papers and tried to examine. But I knew my guardian, and I trusted him. That my affairs turned out disastrous was no fault of his. I am glad of an opportunity to say this. I believe he was truly fond of me. I perhaps have my life out a stupendous falsehood?"

He could not tell Westover, he could not tell Tom, but he could tell them that the affection for his guardian had been pithed by hearing those high pitched voices: "Marry Thomas Broxton! I command you!" To know that his guardian had even wished him the ineffable happiness of calling Olivia Westover had been balm to his sore young heart.

"Yes; but, my dear fellow, it seems that the old bedlamite, as you call the late respected Mrs. Spillman and as we all thought her, was not so far off as we all pronounced her. There was a lot of papers lost and found and lost again. I am in a decidedly delicate position, Broxton. Confound it! I wish you felt more kindly toward me. Not that I wish to see your plan, but, you see, it is just this way: I really would like to discuss this matter freely with you as between interested parties, and yet—"

Tom relaxed a little under the evident distress in the handsome face before him.

"I don't see where the difficulty comes in. I gather that the paper you hold in your hand has some bearing on the matter. You are going to the discovery will cast discredit on the father of your future wife. It makes you hesitate."

"I don't know. This paper contains information upon which the lawyers could build up a very formidable case against me. You are going to the discovery will cast discredit on the father of your future wife. It makes you hesitate."

and properly attested agreement between your grandfather and the said Englishman that its conditions shall be binding upon his heirs and assigns. It is that bold, handsome signature under the first enrolled one is that of your father, Rufus N. Broxton."

Yes, written by him, I suppose, when he came into possession of the property, binding himself not to sell and his heirs and assigns. It is simple binds each successive Broxton to sell Broxton—or, as it was then called, Westralia, this by reason of the several members of the family left on American soil."

Clarence nodded his head impatiently. "A sort of reviled cant!"

"We were entirely within their rights to make such conditions as they chose. My people were at liberty to reject or endorse them."

And so one but a Westralian, acting in good faith, could give a good title to the property."

"So it would seem from this paper," said Tom, "that there are things interesting to father and me."

"It is strange that my guardian should never have known of the existence of this paper."

A long silence fell between the two men. Tom broke it with a loyal defense of the deed.

But then I don't know. It is but a small scrap of paper, easily lost among the many he had to handle. He was my father's friend, and he was my father's friend. Peace to his ashes! Let his mistakes sleep with him in the grave and be forgotten soon."

Westover impulsively laid a hand upon the one that rested on Tom's knee. His fine eyes shone with appreciation of the old man's faith and affection for his guardian had been pithed by hearing those high pitched voices: "Marry Thomas Broxton! I command you!" To know that his guardian had even wished him the ineffable happiness of calling Olivia Westover had been balm to his sore young heart.

Freight Reduction for Edmonton.

A party of C. P. R. officials held a conference with the business men of Edmonton regarding freight rates on Monday of last week. To enable the merchants of Edmonton and its sister town of Strathcona to do a wholesale business with towns between there and Red Deer, the company agreed to comply with the request of the board of trade, and granted a reduction of 50 per cent. on the first five classes of freight for shipment along the C. & E.

The most important question, however, was the rates on grain to Kootenay and the Pacific coast. A reduction of 5 cents per 100 lbs. on oats for export beyond Vancouver, and promised to possibly do better in case of a foreign market being opened up. They contended that the grain rate to Kootenay placed the Edmonton productions on a competitive basis with Americans. However, they promised that in event of the promises of a European market for western oats being realized they would grant special rates to that district to place them on an equal or fair basis for reaching that market.

These concessions are understood to be very acceptable to the people there, but they are not considered to be sufficiently comprehensive.—Commercial.

Removing Survey Posts.

Persons visiting the local post office will doubtless see a notice that has been posted offering a reward of $50 for information which will lead to the conviction of persons removing survey posts. We understand this action has been found necessary by the Territorial Commissioner of Public Works, because many settlers and travellers in the Territories are given to removing the iron posts placed to mark section or quarter section corners, or limits of roads. They evidently do not consider that the law provides a penalty of a long term of imprisonment for this offence, and as the custom has led to serious trouble it has been found necessary to offer the above reward. It is understood that the Government intend prosecuting any parties removing these posts, if the necessary evidence can be obtained.

Tot Causes Night Alarm.

"One night my brother's baby was taken with Croup," writes Mrs. J. C. Snider, of Crittendon, Ky. "It seemed it would strangle before we could get a doctor, so we gave it Dr. King's New Discovery, which gave quick relief, and, per- manently cured it. We always keep it in the house to protect our children from Croup and Whooping Cough. It cured me of a chronic bronchial trouble that no other remedy would relieve." Infallible for Croup, Colds, Throat and Lung Troubles. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at R. C. Ward's Drug Store.

Town Topics.

Father Dubonis went to Calgary on Thursday's train.

Mrs. Chris Marker of Calgary is visiting Mrs. M. Marker, of town.

Ten sectionmen are now employed on this division of the C. & E.

R. C. Ward made a business trip to Calgary on Friday last, returning Monday.

Young shipped a car of fine cattle from Leduc on Wednesday's train for the P. Burns & Co.

C. E. Radian's sale on Tuesday was well attended, and everything sold well, under the hammer of R. L. Rushton.

James Gould is having his house on Pearce St. enlarged and improved this week. It now makes a commodious residence.

A camel can go two weeks without a drink, but there are some men in Wetaskiwin who can't go two days without one.

Mr. Hillman, who has been assisting to overhaul the machinery at the mill here, returned to Strathcona on Friday evening of last week.

Attention is drawn to the auction sale of W. 432-43-25; also some choice cattle, on Saturday of this week, on the above-mentioned farm. See advt.

H. Donaldson left for Calgary on Monday morning to accept a situation in the roundhouse there. His many friends around here wish him every success.

Dr. McIntyre's next professional visit to Wetaskiwin will be on Tuesday, the 22nd, inst. This will be the doctor's last visit until after the Christmas holidays.

Chas. Anderson, painter, left on Monday's train for Olds, where his friends remaining for the winter. Mrs. Anderson has secured a situation as cook in the hotel at that town.

Large quantities of plums and grapes are arriving daily for our merchants, and prices ranging from $1.00 to $1.25 per basket for plums, and about 60c per small basket is asked for the grapes.

Owing the fast-increasing office business in the Pioneer Store, it has been found necessary to engage the services of a second book-keeper and Miss George West has accepted the situation.

The first new grain was delivered on Wednesday by Peter Patneude, who brought in a load of oats. The price paid was 20c; but Mr. Patneude did not bring in his best grain. The quotation for oats is 20 to 22c per bushel.

Dr. Paterson, who has been in the Territories for some time looking after supposed smallpox cases, has returned out. He states that with the exception of one case near Edmonton, the Territories is free from the disease—Regina Standard.

An exciting runaway occurred on Friday of last week. A spirited team of horses, belonging to O. A. Bakken, was tied in front of A. R. Dickson's store; when two dogs began to fight under the wagon. The horses took fright, and dashed down Pearce St. at a lively pace and ran into a telegraph pole south of the station. A horse went on each side of the pole and every- thing came to an abrupt stop. The pole was almost lifted out of the ground. No damage was done to either horses or wagon, and very little to the harness.

Since our last issue, several of our citizens have changed their places of business, and Dr. Walker has changed his place of residence. W. A. Montgomery has moved his family into his new residence west of the Presbyterian church; the police have moved their headquarters from Pearce St. to the house vacated by Mr. Montgomery; M. E. O'Brien has moved his law office to the building vacated by the police; and Dr. Walker has taken up housekeeping in the new house west of N. W. Gould's store, but his office will still be above Ward's drug store. The apartment formerly utilized by John West as an office has been moved to the vacant lot west of Ward's drug store, and has been leased by R. L. Rushton, who will move his office there as soon as it is fixed up.

Walter Durrant went to Calgary on Wednesday's train on a short vacation.

The commodious house R. C. Bauer is having erected is fast nearing completion.

Game is very plentiful around here. So far this season W. Eggleston has bagged no less than 35 geese.

T. J. Pattello, of Orangeville, Ont., has been in town for several days selling maps of Canada. He sold upwards of 25 in town.

Mrs. F. Hucklell has the foundation for her residence, which she is building south of the school, completed. It is of both stone and red brick.

There will be a practice of the fire brigade this Thursday evening. These practices should be held weekly for a time until a thorough organization is completed.

A large dance and card party are to be given in Herie's Hall on Wednesday evening, October 16th, under the auspices of the Wetaskiwin fire brigade. The object is to raise funds to defray expenses connected with the procuring of necessary fire apparatus.

J. S. Robertson sold his farm, S. E. 432-43-20, on Thursday morning, to J. H. Knowles, of Illinois for a good figure. It was Mr. Robertson's intention to sell this farm by public auction on October 22, but a private sale was consummated.

Several loads of good plump oats were refused at the elevators on Thursday because they were too damp. Farmers must be cautious, as the grain men positively refuse to take grain that is not thoroughly dry. If they took damp oats they would be unable to compete in the outside markets.

The change in the C. P. R.'s train service takes effect on the 13th of October. Thereafter the main train will leave Winnipeg at 4:00 p. m. daily. In addition to the daily service east, the Company are arranging a triweekly special train to Toronto for the accommodation of the returning travellers. This train will commence on Tuesday, the 15th of October, and run every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, leaving Winnipeg at 6 p. m.

This district will soon be famous for its mammoth vegetables. Last week was spoke of big potatoes, but since our last issue J. R. Braak, of Millet, left at our office a turnip of the Swedish Rutabaga variety which weighs over 25 lbs. It is certainly a beauty. John Dymak has also sent in some very large sweet turnips, which are smooth and well formed. There is also an everyday cabbage in the office that measures over 42 inches in circumference, left by Adam Kalari; and on Wednesday an onion that measures 13 inches in circumference was left by a party, whose name is not known.

A DESIRABLE PREMIUM

In making choice of a premium for their weekly Free Press, 1901-02, the Free Press, Winnipeg, have secured something quite out of the ordinary. Consideration of the value of the farmers of Western Canada of an accurate thermometer and a reliable barometer led to negotiations with the best makers of such instruments in America, and as a result of those negotiations there has been obtained a large number of accurate and reliable combined thermometers and barometers, which have been tested carefully, after being made especially to suit the extreme of climate met with in this country. The barometer is guaranteed to indicate atmospheric changes correctly, and the thermometer to register temperatures down to 50 degrees below zero. These handsome instruments, indispensable in every home in Western Canada, will be sent free to any person forwarding $1.00 for the Weekly Free Press.
